

COURT REVOKES BOND

Civil Rights Congress Surety Barred for Christoffel

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP)—The United States Court of Appeals today threw out the $10,000 bond provided by the Civil Rights Congress for Harold Christoffel but permitted him to put up new bond—the source of which was not officially disclosed.

The three-man court's decision said the Civil Rights Congress "is not a satisfactory surety and not a satisfactory source of bail." Christoffel, formerly a labor union official in Milwaukee, was convicted last year for the second time of falsely swearing before a Congressional committee he had never been a Communist. He has appealed. The Supreme Court reversed his first conviction in 1948.

The Justice Department in asking revocation of bond noted that four of eleven top Communists convicted in a New York Court had jumped the $20,000 bond posted for each of them by the Civil Rights Congress. The Attorney General has cited that organization as subversive.
