Civil Rights Congress Got Party Money, Inquiry Hears

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (UP)—A New York policewoman who joined the Communist party to check on its activities testified today that Communist party clubs in Brooklyn had given money to the Civil Rights Congress "in various ways."

Brooklyn Communists also were ordered to join the Civil Rights Congress to "give it leadership," she added.

Mrs. Mildred Blauvelt, a member of the police force since 1942, said that she had been a party member from April, 1943, until she was expelled in 1951 as a suspected police informer.

She testified before a panel of the Subversive Activities Control Board at hearings to determine whether Civil Rights Congress should register as a Communist-front organization.

Mrs. Blauvelt said that she had served at various times as financial secretary to two Brooklyn Communist clubs—the Lincoln Road Club and the Jay Smith Club. In 1946, she added, the Communist party in Brooklyn assessed the Lincoln Road Club $5 to help defray expenses of a Civil Rights Congress rally.
