The secretarial post went to Jane Cooke for the second consecutive term.

Notes: Trial Was Dull

By J. A. C. DUNN

(Special To The Daily Tar Heel)

GREENSBORO, April 19.—The Government rested its case in a very slow-moving and on the whole uninteresting session of the trial of Junius Scales, charged with violation of the Smith Act, today.

Charles Childs, junior from High Point, and witness for the FBI in the case, was examined during the morning, but in the afternoon session was asked only three questions. Two were put to him by Scales' attorney, a short dark man with a New York accent: What draft board was Childs registered with? and another question involving an economics course Childs had once taken.

The prosecuting attorney for the Government asked Childs only one question: What were Childs' recent activities in the Communist Party? To which Childs answered that he had been a member of the Chapel Hill Communist Club until it broke up, and after that he had been in contact with two men known to be very active in the Party. Childs was then permitted to stand down.

It was noticeable that very few people in the courtroom showed any signs of excitement. The spectators filled the available space but were quite calm. Childs was a relaxed witness, and Scales himself seemed singularly unperturbed. The jury, consisting of 13 men and 3 women, sat back in their chairs and appeared unaffected by the proceedings, as did the judge and the prosecuting attorneys, though the latter from time to time interjected objections to their opponent's defense, most of which were sustained. Only Scales' attorney, the short dark man from New York, seemed tense and a bit worried.

After the Government had rested its case, the Scales defense hurriedly prepared to continue, though pleading inability to continue until the next day.

Made 'Contact' With Cell Sunday

GREENSBORO, April 19.—A Communist Party cell is still in existence in Durham, a 24-year-old FBI undercover agent at the University of North Carolina told the Junius Scales trial in Federal Court here today.

Charles B. Childs, who volunteered to join the Communist Party as an undercover agent while still at Carolina, said that he had made "contact" with the cell two days ago.

The next day—Monday—he was called to the stand here as a surprise government witness against Scales.

Childs did not go into the scope or activities of the Communist cell in Durham.

In other dramatic developments today, Childs also told of attending an all-day meeting with Scales, a confessed Communist, and other party members in a Duke forest picnic area near Durham three years ago.

Childs said the meeting was held in October of 1952 and served as a "reunion" for those who attended a secret Communist Party School the month before near Winston-Salem.

Childs said Scales and his wife, Gladys, were on hand for the session. Childs also identified others who gathered in picnic area No. 10 as: Jerry Van Camp of Durham, George and Betsy Van Camp of Winston-Salem (Jerry's brother), and a Durham girl identified only to him as "Blanche."

He quoted "Blanche" as saying she "had gotten into some sort of trouble about distributing leaflets" of some type in Durham. Childs said he was unable to give her real name.

Jerry Van Camp was identified by Childs yesterday as a Communist. Childs said yesterday also that Nat Bond of Durham also was a party member.

Today, Childs said Bill Robertson, a former Carolina student, whom he called a Communist yesterday, is living in Durham at the present time.

Childs said the Duke Forest meeting broke up after an all-day session and that he returned to Chapel Hill in a car driven by George Van Camp and also containing Scales.

Childs said that as the car approached Chapel Hill, Scales laid down in the floor of the back "to keep from being seen."

(Ralph Clontz Jr. of Charlotte, a former FBI undercover agent, had previously testified that Scales went "underground" in 1950.)

Childs said those attending the Duke Forest "picnic" severely criticized him for going against Communist Party orders and leaving his industrial job in Winston-Salem and returning to school.

Childs quoted Scales' wife as saying that day she did "not know if he could be trusted" because he refused to obey the party orders.

Childs said he met up with the two Van Camp men in a parked car behind Graham Memorial Student Union Building on the Carolina campus and drove to Durham where Scales met them in Duke Forest.

He quoted Mrs. Betsy Van Camp as saying that "arrangements" had already been made to use the picnic area.

Honor Council Tries 30 Girls In Spring

The Women's Honor Council has tried a total of 30 cases so far during the spring semester, according to a report issued yesterday by Miss Nancy Whisnant, council chairman.

Twenty-four of the cases were violations of the social rules, one a violation of the Honor Code, two infractions of both the social rules and the Honor Code, and one dealt with violations of the Campus Code, Honor Code and the social rules, said the report.

The three cases involving infractions of the Honor Code were each given a council reprimand plus lengthy probation, according to the report. The case concerning a violation of the Honor Code only was found not guilty.

The majority of the social rules violations occurred from the defendant failing to have her sign-out slip signed by a member of the dormitory administration, according to the report, which added that eight of such cases (See WOMEN'S, page 4)

Scales Takes His Turn

GREENSBORO, April 19.—After calling only three witnesses the government unexpectedly rested its case against accused Communist leader Junius Scales today.

This took the defense by surprise. So much so that Scales' lawyer, David Rein, asked the court for a delay until tomorrow before beginning his presentation. Judge Albert V. Bryan gave him 15 minutes.

Rein said he was not prepared to call his witnesses. He did not say how many there would be or where they lived. Scales was seen filling out three or four subpoenas to be served by the U. S. Marshal today.

Shortly after the halfway point in the seventh day of the Federal Court trial, District Atty. Edwin M. Stanley took Charles B. Childs off the witness stand. Stanley then said he had completed the case against the red-haired 35-year-old defendant.

Childs, 24, a physics student at the University of North Carolina, had testified that his last contact with the Communist Party as an FBI undercover informant came last Sunday. He said he paid his party dues at Durham to Bill Evans. He identified Evans as business manager of the Carolinas district.

Rein, after a rather perfunctory cross-examination of Childs, read to the jury from several pieces of Communist literature introduced as defense evidence. The readings were intended to support the defense position that the party does not advocate force and violence. Then Rein announced that he had nothing further until he called his first witness. Court was adjourned.

Panty Raid!

An estimated 500 frolicking students had gotten the first panty-raid of the season off to a start as The Daily Tar Heel went to press last night.

According to an 11 o'clock telephone call from correspondent Jack Weasel, a "lone cop" and Assistant Dean of Student Affairs Ray Jeffries had appeared on the scene.

The raiders, having gotten a single pair of panties from 3rd floor Kenan, allegedly had broken a lock on a Carr Dorm door.
